ABOUT PASO ROBLES

In Spanish, our name means “Pass of the Oaks,” a tribute to the rolling hills and majestic oaks that captivated our pioneers. Today, these oaks are joined by vineyards, olive orchards, farms and ranches that inspire our local cuisine and culture.

Paso Robles resides midway between San Francisco and Los Angeles on California’s Central Coast. Our community of 30,000 residents is known for its warm hospitality and entrepreneurial spirit. The heart of our downtown is called City Park, a classic plaza featuring grand old shade trees, a Carnegie library, a children’s playground and a traditional bandstand that serves as the centerpiece for our many events. All around the park, restaurants, wine bars, pubs, inns and specialty shops set a relaxed and flavorful tone amid early 20th century-style architecture.

Just minutes from town, along country roads, you will discover what Sunset Magazine recently called the West Coast’s “most exciting wine region,” where more than 250 wineries make their home.

Brimming with good taste yet always down to earth, Paso Robles is pleased to be in your plans. We look forward to showing you around.
